

Digital Single Market

DIGIBYTE | 21 February 2019

The EU puts on the table EUR 2.2 million for three projects in the area of media freedom and pluralism es EUR 2.2 million available for three he area of media freedom and oting quality journalism and cross-en media professionals and media d protects freedom of expression, quality ross borders. Media freedom and ts enshrined in the EU's Charter of titute essential foundations of democratic uary 2019, three separate calls for pilot uality journalism, and cross-border rofessionals and self-regulatory bodies. ve to promote and stimulate media pe.

Media rising stars

Budget available: EUR

Media rising stars, will facilitate the mobility of media outlets and cross-border cooperation between media outlets as a means to promote the media sector and foster an environment of media freedom and media pluralism.

Opportunities for minority media

(budget available: EUR 500.000), offering opportunities for minority language media, will give media outlets across Europe the chance to undertake internships with leading European media outlets as a route to the professionalization of local media outlets and to gain a broader and more diverse range of different media and newsroom experience.

Media in the digital age udget available: EUR 500.000), media study and map the activities of media own as ‘media or press councils’) in the ing a platform to facilitate cooperation ilitate their adaptation to the online world. tribute to the councils’ engagement with er online stakeholders.

o-funds projects to promote media defend journalists under threat. Since ded actions geared towards:

dia freedom and pluralism and supporting ournalism in the EU Member States and in uropean Commission has co-funded n Centre for Press and Media Freedom media pluralism in the EU Member States ountries. The European Commission has d implementation of the “Media Pluralism re for Media Pluralism and Media mission recently signed a grant in action with the CMPF to adapt the MPM its.

edom and Pluralism